Types of Settlements

There are four main types of settlements in Tower of Gates:

- Cities: Cities are the largest and most populous settlements in Tower of Gates. They are home to thousands of people from all walks of life. Cities are typically ruled by a mayor or a council of elders, and they have their own laws and customs.
- Towns: Towns are smaller than cities, but they are still home to a large number of people. Towns are typically governed by a mayor or a town council, and they have their own laws and customs. Towns are often the center of trade and commerce in a region.
- Villages: Villages are the smallest type of settlement in Tower of Gates. They are home to a few hundred people, and they are typically governed by a village elder or a council of elders. Villages are often located in rural areas, and they are the center of agricultural activity in a region.
- Hamlets: Hamlets are the smallest type of settlement in Tower of Gates. They are home to a few dozen people, and they are typically governed by a family or a group of families. Hamlets are often located in remote areas, and they are the center of hunting and gathering activity in a region.

Settlements and the World of Tower of Gates

The settlements in Tower of Gates are not just places for players to rest and restock their supplies. They are also home to unique characters, factions, and quests that can help players shape the world's narrative.

For example, the city of Mytros is home to the Academy of Arcane Arts, a renowned school of magic. Players who join the academy will have access to powerful spells and abilities, and they will be able to learn from some of the most famous mages in the world.

The town of River's End is home to the Thieves' Guild, a powerful criminal organization. Players who join the guild will be able to gain access to exclusive items and information, and they will be able to participate in daring heists and assassinations.

The village of Greenleaf is home to the Circle of Druids, a group of nature-worshipping priests. Players who join the circle will be able to learn powerful healing spells, and they will be able to summon animals to their aid.
