Background

Springsteen began writing the songs for Under Red Sky in 1991, shortly after the release of his previous album, Human Touch. He was in a reflective mood at the time, and the songs on Under Red Sky reflect his thoughts on his life and career. The album was recorded in Los Angeles, with Springsteen working with a new producer, Brendan O'Brien.

Music and Lyrics

Under Red Sky is a departure from Springsteen's previous work in several ways. The music is more atmospheric and less rock-oriented, and the lyrics are more personal and reflective. The album features some of Springsteen's most introspective songs, such as "Red Headed Woman" and "4th of July, Asbury Park (Sandy)." The album also includes some more upbeat songs, such as "Living Proof" and "Lucky Town."

Reception

Under Red Sky was released to critical acclaim. Critics praised the album's atmospheric sound and Springsteen's personal and reflective lyrics. The album was a commercial success, peaking at number two on the Billboard 200 chart. It has since been certified double platinum by the Recording Industry Association of America (RIAA).

Legacy

Under Red Sky is considered one of Bruce Springsteen's finest works. It is a departure from his previous work, but it is a cohesive and atmospheric album that features some of his most personal and reflective lyrics. The album has been praised by critics and fans alike, and it is considered a classic of American rock music.
